Universal Building Maintenance Reaches Out to Yosemite National Park

Protecting Our Land and Resources

SANTA ANA, California (October 6, 2009) – Universal Building Maintenance, the all-green janitorial division of Universal Services of America, is doing their part to protect the environment by sponsoring Yosemite National Park. The “Sponsor a Wild Place” program, put forth by Sierra Club, offers businesses the opportunity to help U.S. national parks in need of protection from environmental concerns. The funds from Universal Building Maintenance’s sponsorship will help promote the use of shuttles within Yosemite National Park, which will lower the vast amount of traffic and air pollution the area currently suffers from.

“A beautiful area filled with thousands of animal and plant species, natural resources and breathtaking scenery, Yosemite National Park is a historic landmark that Universal Building Maintenance is proud to sponsor,” said Steve Jones, Co-CEO/COO of Universal Services of America.

“Our company is always looking out for ways to help clean up the planet,” said Mark Olivas, President of Universal Building Maintenance. “Sponsoring a national park like Yosemite and helping to keep its natural beauty seems like a logical way to support a better life for present and future generations.”

Universal Building Maintenance believes in protecting the planet’s resources, and ensures that every building they clean is done in an environmentally preferred way, utilizing green cleaning processes, chemicals and equipment. Their commitment to the environment cuts down on waste and advocates a healthy workplace.
